Originally appeared as a small soft patch of chipples at base of rampart. This ^{in upper layer of rampart rubble} when sectioned appeared to extend further under the rubble & through it, W-Wds, finally forming a long hole. The section was drawn as shown, and the chipple layer removed from the remainder. The hole was then abandoned.

This feature overlies much jointing, and was probably natural, & due either to jointing below or tree roots above.
